THANKSGIVING

Providence has been kind to the people of Hood River during the past 12 months. While individual families among our valley population have been visited by sorrows, as a whole we have enjoyed more blessings than ordinarily come to a community. We have not been visited by any devastating onslaughts of Nature's elements. Indeed, our climate has been a nurturing one. Gentle rains and warming sunshines have been instrumental in giving us dispositions of gladness and have stimulated a luxuriant growth for the seed planted in our soil. The man who has worked has seen satisfying profits spring from his labors. We can feast today, thankful for the peace, happiness and prosperity that is ours.

Not all happiness by any means is derived from the smiles of the God of Mammon. Still, a large part of life's contentment is derived from the material things, to which most of our waking hours are devoted. Considered from this phase, Hood River people may be doubly thankful today; for never in history has Hood River business seemed more solid.

The Hood River valley's great industry is apple growing. While the crop of 1915 is somewhat short in quantity, the returns will be as good as ever on any former year. Orchardists have been given a new interest in their work. It has been demonstrated to them that their co-operative efforts to specialize in marketing their product in the country's chief marts can be made successful.

There may have been a day when Hood River orchardist were possessed of a more superficial pride than today. There was a prevailing feeling among them that the man who grew apples here in this chosen spot of the world should not contaminate himself by even considering other forms of agriculture. The ordinary farmer was considered in a manner of pity.

Behold the exceedingly great change that a few years' time has worked. The Hood River man has become a real farmer, and now he is possessed of a real, substantial pride. Some of our best apple raisers are almost as proud of their fat stock as of the extra fancy apples gathered from their banner trees. We should be thankful today for this leavening, which has really elevated us.

The people of all Oregon will be thankful; for the tide of prosperity has reached to the four corners of the commonwealth. The year 1915 has been good and the future bids fair to be better. New railroads are being projected; new industries are being fostered; and the prospects are good for the man who wants to work.

As a nation we can truly return the most sincere thanks today, when we compare the peaceful homes of our land with the war stricken, grief burdened home cotes of Europe.

AN APPLE BOOST

"What is the matter with the big red apple," is the title of a comprehensive story of the rise, fall and re-ascension of the apple industry in the northwest, written by Walter V. Woehlke and appearing in the November Sunset. While it may appear to growers of some of the fruit districts that Mr. Woehlke has missed some of the smaller details of apple culture history, these omissions are few.

Mr. Woehlke's story is one that is of particular interest to apple growers. It is of value to men whose money is invested in fruit lands in tried and proven districts; for it shows that the apple business in the northwest is by no means dead and interred. Mr. Woehlke touches on the remedies for betterment of future marketing conditions. The story is a boost for the great industry.

Hood River's story is well told by Mr. Woehlke. He pictures the gentleman farmer, who today has become a real farmer. He calls attention to our cows and hogs and our corn. The Sunset writer shows that he is well acquainted with us.

Our neighbors, the ranchers of the White Salmon district, are counting much on an increased acreage of strawberries. The commercial fruit of the neighboring valley, says the White Salmon Enterprise, just as the wild berries that grow so luxuriantly, is of excellent quality and flavor. Continuing the Enterprise says: "While every rancher grows some strawberries for home use, many of them are prevented from growing them commercially through lack of adequate shipping facilities. If the White Salmon-Snowden railroad is constructed it will make thousands of acres available for strawberries which are now producing nothing whatever. From the terminus at the White Salmon dock to the terminus at Snowden the proposed railroad is 25 miles in length with a rise in elevation of 1700 feet."

Washington horticulturists should erect an imposing monument to the worm that made possible their sweetstakes prize at the San Francisco fair.

LEST WE FORGET

"The Brewery Grade," a steep street in the eastern portion of The Dalles, is a name that is repugnant to The Dalles Chronicle. Says the Wasco county paper:

What a euphonious name that is! The local brewery, which is at the foot of the grade, will go out of existence the first of next year, so why not change the name? We never did like that appellation, anyway, and it always rubbed the wrong way to so designate that incline.

Certainly the brewery will go out of existence. With the wave of prohibition sweeping the country, even Milwaukee, instead of a brewing center may become known for its candies. Why not keep the old name? In days to come it will be pointed to with much interest like the homes that housed witches in olden Salem.

The Columbia river highway has received widespread publicity. In a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor appears a comprehensive story of the campaign leading up to the building of the wonderful road and the magnificent scenic treasures of the Cascades made accessible to motorists.

The profits which Hood River derived from its fruit crop were due as much to organization as to the growing of good fruit. Production of a good article is only one half of the work; getting it into the hands of the consumer in good condition and getting a fair price for it is the other half—Oregonian.

We hope the weather will be fair this afternoon.

On to the firemen's ball!

Barrett Meeting Interesting

The Barrett Parent-Teacher Association held its regular meeting at the school house Friday evening. There was a good attendance and a very interesting program, prepared by J. R. Forden, J. H. Jeffrey and C. E. Nesbit. An instrumental duet was rendered by Everett and Eudora King and a song by eight girls. A talk was given by Miss Mary Frazier, who is an interesting speaker well qualified to handle her subject, "Our school system as viewed by the taxpayer." She has had a number of years' experience as a teacher, also as a taxpayer, so knew both sides of the story and presented them in such a manner that it would be hard for any parent not to feel an awakened interest in the welfare of his child, and a greater necessity for co-operation with the teacher, both in the school room and at home. Entirely too much of the parents' responsibility is passed along to the teacher. Most of her hearers agreed with her that the boy or girl, as he or she is being raised today, is not an ideal child. Our ancestors, were given an overdose of "all work and no play," while the opposite is true of the children of this day. Work, not hard, but pleasant, is a necessity for our growing children. It teaches them a responsibility, which is sure to come at some time, which cannot be assumed at a moment's notice, and yet is thrust upon so many totally unprepared for it.

A general discussion followed Miss Frazier's talk until it was voted to carry the subject into the next meeting, when the reports of two committees, appointed to investigate and suggest practical changes in our system, would be ready. These committees are as follows: One to investigate and report regarding home credit system and the other to visit the school and report their impressions.

A piano solo by L. W. Bishop and Miss Madelon Smith concluded the program.

The next meeting of the association will be held Friday evening, December 3, and will be in charge of Mrs. Anna Sawyer, assisted by Miss Emma Jones and Mrs. William Farrell.

Veteran Given Surprise Birthday Party

One of the pleasantest events of recent record in Hood River was the surprise birthday party given Milo F. Jacobs at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. J. Frederick, Saturday afternoon by friends, comrades and members of Canby Post and Relief Corps. Mr. Jacobs on Saturday was 79 years of age.

The participants in the surprise met at the home of Mrs. Henry Steed. From there they marched in a body to Mrs. Frederick's home. They were: Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Blythe, Mrs. L. M. Bentley, Mrs. A. O. Anderson, Mrs. W. A. Stark, Mrs. S. W. Stark, Mrs. Henry Steed, Mrs. B. B. Powell and Mrs. J. Williams.

"How old are you?" shouted the chorus of voices. "His surprise," after a moment, Mr. Jacobs lustily shouted back: "I'm twenty and you're twenty, too!" The guests were made to think of that couplet of Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"We're twenty, we're twenty—Who says we are more?"

As a jactanapes—put him out at the door.

What? Gray temples at twenty? Yes, white, if you please.

Where the snowflakes fall thickest, there nothing can freeze."

Mr. Jacobs served in the First Minnesota regiment during an Indian war, and during the Civil war he saw active duty as a private in Company E Eighth Minnesota. After the Battle of Wilkeson Pike near Murfreesboro, Tenn., he went with his regiment to Washington, D. C., and later joined Sheridan's army at Wilmington, N. C. He has been a member of Canby Post, G. A. R., for the past 14 years.

Miss Howes Presented at Recital

Miss Dorothy Nash presented Miss Ruth Howes, of Hood River, in recital Friday afternoon in Eilers recital hall, assisted by Miss Kathleen Sealy, soprano, and Miss Medora Steele, accompanist.

The program was: Sonata, G Minor (Schubert); "Faschingsschwankchen" Wein, (Schumann) Miss Howes; "Down in the Forest" (Ronald) "Were My Songs With Wings Provided" (Hahn), "Sunlight" (Ware), Miss Kathleen Sealy; "Widmung" (Schumann-Liszt), Eudora (Cyril Scott); "Valse Triste" (Sibelius), "Hungarian" (McDowell) Miss Howes; Ballet (Debussy) "Furiant" (Dvorak) Miss Howes.—The Portland Journal.

ELECTRIC INSTALLS NEW PIPE ORGAN

Walter Shay, accompanied by Hans Hoerlein, organist, of the Electric theatre, returned from Portland Saturday where they completed arrangements for the installation of a genuine orchestral pipe organ, which after Thanksgiving, will be used for accompaniment and solo work at this popular photo-play house.

The organ has three key boards, two of them to be played by the organist and one by means of the feet, and has numerous characteristic sets of pipes, imitating, or rather producing, the tones of instruments such as flute, piccolo, bassoon, etc.

The accompaniment of moving pictures by means of a pipe organ represents the highest development of music applied to moving pictures because the organist can readily modulate his accompaniment from one subject to another to be thoroughly appropriate and always in time with the picture as developed. This work is not possible by any mechanical means, and even the greatest orchestra leaders have not yet developed proficiency to make such accompaniment work always appropriate to the scene on the screen.

Hood River music lovers and friends of the best in motion pictures will be glad to know that, with one exception, Hood River is the first to adopt this up to date musical equipment, outside of the great moving picture houses in Portland, and Messrs. Shay & Whitcomb, the enterprising owner of his house, are to be congratulated for their public spiritedness in this matter.

TWO VALLEY STORES ARE BURGLARIZED

Kenneth Hill a 15 year old boy captured on the night of the Hood River district by Sheriff Johnson and Constable Clark and held on a charge of having burglarized the store of J. H. Shel-drake at Mount Hood Friday evening, confessed Sunday night to the crime. The boy's confession implicates his father and a brother.

The Hill boy is very large for his age. He is six feet and two inches tall and weighs 180 pounds. Burglars entered the Rockford store of the Consolidated Mercantile Co. Saturday night. Eight dollars in cash and toys and candies were taken from the Rockford store.

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

Near damage suits, it has been reported, have resulted from injuries to trespassing dogs by locomotives of the Mount Hood Railway Co. Claims of owners of such deceased and maimed canines will be in vogue in the face of the precedent, reported below from The West Publishing Co.'s "Docket." Railway attorneys should file this plea, based upon the doctrine of contributory negligence. In case the animal is injured by the cat, the railway counsel should see an essay by E. V. Lucas on cats, which appeared in last week's issue of Life.

The Docket plea follows:

"2. For further answer, the defendant says that the deceased dog, for whose untimely and most lachrymose death the plaintiff claims balm and compensation, was himself guilty of the most gross, wanton and inexcusable negligence in the premises, which proximately contributed to his own undoing and precipitate death, in this: That said canine, while prowling the environs of the vicinity, being at the time of predaceous proclivities, suddenly aroused from his innocent and inoffensive burrow a timid and shrinking lot in that neighborhood called a rabbit, alias Molly Cottontail; that immediately thereafter said dog of plaintiff entered into hot pursuit of said rabbit, being at the time in full cry thereafter, in which pursuit said hound was immediately joined by certain and sundry mongrel curs who had foregathered thereat, upon what business defendant knows not, but upon information and belief states were upon no lawful or legitimate enterprise then engaged; that said rabbit, being possessed of the cunning of his forebears, as set out in full in the book Uncle Remus, and well knowing at the time that his pursuers must of necessity be either outfooted or otherwise circumvented in their hue and cry, and seeing approaching the locomotive upon the track of defendant, made straight and forthwith a dextrous track, and so calculated the crossing in front of the iron Leviathan that his life would be spared, and the bound of plaintiff sacrificed, if the latter should at the same distance follow him, did cross in safety said track; but said hound, well knowing the danger of attempting to cross in front of said engine, under the circumstances (which were open and obvious to him, or by the exercise of reasonable doggy prudence would have been known), nevertheless negligently attempted to cross the track, more intent upon capture of his prey than preservation of his worthless life proximately became extinct and transported to the happy hunting grounds."
